Storedot receives $20 million investment from BP

Storedot

The Israel based private company developing a new type of molecular battery for phones and cars, has received a $20 million investment from British Petroleum.

Clearly the oil company has seen the writing on the wall,and is looking to diversify out of simply being in petroleum supply into battery technology, thus .

.

To read the article in full, please click HERE