We list the mining stocks that rose during the year, and the ones that fell the most, and the reasons for those price actions.

The best performing stock was Argosy Minerals, up 69%, after starting lithium production at its mine in Salta, Argentina.

The worst was Cabral Gold, which got caught needing a financing during tax loss selling, and fell dramatically, losing over 60% in a couple of weeks, and having to quickly close the first tranche of the financing, presumably to prevent backward, after the shareprice fell below the placing price, and stayed there.

The surprise biggest riser in the commodities sector was Thermal coal, probably due to the Ukraine war requiring coal fired power stations in Europe to be reactivated to replace Russian gas.

It easily beat Lithium into second place, and nickel into a distant third.

We suggest the best metals to follow in 2023 in our opinion.
