Bitcoin $BTC

Has come under further pressure during the last few days as a further exchange hack, Bithumb for US $30 million has been reported in South Korea, and the Japanese FSA have sent out improvement notices.

Bitcoin traded briefly at around $5,800 before climbing back above $6,000 later in the day.

So far this year Bitcoin has lost over 50%, Bitcoin cash 83%, Ripple, 88%, Ethereum 68%, and EOS 59%.

After the mania that saw Bitcoin rise from 5c to over $20,000, it looks as though some are cashing out and back into fiat, and people arriving late to the party are financing the exit of those leaving, never a good idea.

Speaking as a person that was going to invest into crypto, I am now keeping my powder dry awaiting a perceived good value entry point.
