Comment

This looks a very opportunistic offer given the timing so soon after the downgrade in guidance due to mechanical issues at the Gruyere mine.

Worth just over A$3.05 at current market prices, the offer is at a decent premium, but I have held this stock for over twelve years and I would vote down the offer personally.

I wonder if they will come back with a more attractive offer? If they offered a minimum of A$3.50 I would be happy to sell for that now and reinvest the profits into other Australian producers, there are quite a few that are looking promising at the current gold price.

GOLD ROAD RESOURCES RECEIPT AND REJECTION OF NON-BINDING INDICATIVE OFFER FROM GOLD FIELDS

Gold Road Resources Ltd (ASX: GOR) (Gold Road or the Company) notes Gold Fields Limited (Gold Fields) market announcement of 24 March 2025 and confirms it has received, considered and subsequently rejected an opportunistic, conditional and non-binding indicative proposal from Gold Fields (the Offer).

The Offer, received after market close on 7 March 2025, contemplated an acquisition of 100 percent of the shares on issue in Gold Road, by way of scheme of arrangement (the Proposed Transaction) for A$2.27 cash per share plus a variable cash amount equal to the proportionate value of each Gold Road shareholder's interest in the shares that Gold Road holds in De Grey Mining Ltd.

After careful consideration and engagement with Gold Fields, the Gold Road Board unanimously formed the view that the Offer materially under values Gold Road and is highly opportunistic in nature.

Gold Road notes that the receipt of the Offer coincided with a lower March 2025 quarter production due to maintenance on the primary crusher and the failure of two conveyor belts (announced to ASX on 18 March 2025).

Gold Fields is the Manager of the Gruyere Joint Venture.

Further, the Offer appears to have been opportunistically tabled by Gold Fields in advance of the completion of exploration and studies into the potential underground expansion of the Gruyeren mine.

An 18-month drilling program to confirm that the Gruyere orebody extends at depth, with the results of that program being material to properly understanding the potential upside value of Gruyere.

The Offer attributes no value at all to the potential underground expansion of the Gruyere mine. As such, the Gold Road Board formed the view that it is not in the best interest of its shareholders to accept the Offer and rejected the Offer on 14 March 2025.

Gold Road tabled an alternative proposal to acquire Gold Fields' interest in the Gruyere Joint Venture (Gruyere) (the Gold Road Counterproposal).

The Gold Road Counterproposal for Gruyere was rejected by Gold Fields.
