Comment

This company never ceases to amaze me.

Every time the share price starts to rise, they make an announcement to drag it back down again!

Operational difficulties and severe weather events are, of course, part of the natural risks involved in investing in mining companies, but why oh why do they see the need to cross the planet to invest in a project, when in Western Australia, and the cuountry as a whole, there are an abundance of gold projects?

The market clearly doesn't like this news any more than I do, and I can understand why.
