Mining Review 15th June 2025

City Investors Circle published the review of the past week for watchlist stocks as well as the commodity markets.

Meeka Metals confirmed the commissioning of the processing plant as production commences at their Murchison gold project.

Gold was falling slowly until the Isreali attack on Iran, and it has now bounced over $3,400, and the large producing gold miners have all bounced back up after sliding for a couple of weeks.

Most of the industrial metals fell on less favourable economic news.

“Rotation” is the new buzzword in the mining sector, as multiple commentators predict people are moving at least some of their profits from larger gold producers into more risky but potentially higher rewarding exploration juniors.

I have considered top slicing some profits, but only to invest into companies coming into production, such as West Red Lake Gold, Meeka Metals, Horizon etc. etc.

I do not yet feel there is a great opportunity in the early stage exploration space, and feel the largest upside remains with producers and soon to be producers.

There are hundreds of exploration companies out there, picking the one that will jump 100% or so after a drill result is like finding a needle in a haystack, so I prefer to stay with the producers for now.
