City Investors Circle Review 15th March 2026

It was another volatile week on the metals markets, with gold, silver, and most other metals falling in price.

As a result many miners are falling in value, as oil is one of the major costs of mining for most companies, and especially open pit projects. One market commentator stated that oil accounts for around 9% of the cost of gold mining.

Whilst it’s dispiriting to see the price of well performing companies falling, I’m maintaining my positions. Once the Iran turmoil is over I expect a relief rally, it’s a question of waiting for me.
