City Investors Circle Mining Review Sunday Update 13th February

The media is talking up the potential for a war in the Ukraine and an imminent Russian invasion, and that is driving gold and oil prices upwards.

Gold was up 3% week on week, and silver an impressive 5%. Naturally many gold and silver juniors had a good week as a result. Gold was helped by rising US inflation as much as Ukraine tensions

The dollar also rose on increased interest rate speculation, perm any one of many different speculations as to the number of rises rumoured throughout the media. I still insist there is a limit as to how high rates can go as their level effects government borrowing costs.

Barrick Gold reported depletion after mining of +150% in 2021, after a few years of falling reserves, a positive sign.

Chaarat Gold are experiencing hard times trying to raise the capex for their mine in the Kyrgyz Republic, due to the fact that the state have taken the Kumtor Gold Mine from Centerra Gold, who have no choice but to negotiate a settlement.

Obviously that action has caused potential financiers to lose faith in the Kyrgyz Republic, and who can blame them? They have acted in bad faith in my opinion, and deserve the negative publicity they have received. Sadly none of this is the fault of Chaarat's shareholders (nor Centerra's either for that matter), yes as always it is the shareholders who will suffer.

For this reason I am very choosy about the jurisdictions I invest in.
