Nearly 1000 altcoins now disappeared from the market

Crypto

Whilst Bitcoin has survived many rumours of its demise, it has been reported that 934 crypto currencies and altcoins have disappeared from the market.

The website ‘deadcoins’ lists those 934 coins and tokens that have already perished, and there are currently 2093 active coins trading (Source : Cointelegraph).

.

.

.

.

Crypto

Whilst Bitcoin has survived many rumours of its demise, it has been reported that 934 crypto currencies and altcoins have disappeared from the market.

The website ‘deadcoins’ lists those 934 coins and tokens that have already perished, and there are currently 2093 active coins trading (Source : Cointelegraph).

On Dec. 31, BTC developer Jimmy Song highlighted Bitcoin’s decentralised nature as the quality which separates it from altcoins.

“In Bitcoin, entrepreneurs decide what innovations will happen with their money and effort. In altcoins, central committees decide what innovations will happen,” he wrote.