

PDAC – Day 3

The PDAC mining conference in Toronto entered its third day today, amid some unseasonal slightly warmer weather and rain showers.

Less attendees today, maybe as the relentless post conference partying takes its toll?

As is usual on the third day of this three and a half day marathon, the floor was much quieter, not many investors in the aisles, and some mutterings of discontent from the booths about “no investors, all trade people here”, which of course is largely correct.

To avoid the packed flight home tomorrow, and an extra £260 fare!, I'm writing this from the airport prior to boarding my flight home

The Wednesday half day is always a non event so giving it a miss for once.