Global Mining Finance Conference Was Busy

Global Mining Finance Conference

The London Global Mining Finance Conference once again lead investors into the London mining month with some lively and thought provoking presentations, and a wonderful new venue.

We all know the junior mining sector has plummeted, what this conference did was focus on the current undervaluations, and speculate on the opportunities that will be there when market sentiment returns.

The Global Mining Finance Conference Commenced The London Mining Month

The London Global Mining Finance Conference once again lead investors into the London mining month, with some lively and thought provoking presentations, and a wonderful new venue.

As is the norm, this conference precedes the two larger conferences taking place in the next two weeks, 121 Mining Forum, and Resourcing Tomorrow.

This boutique event focuses on a combination of a select group of mining companies with a couple of keynote speakers focusing on the commodities and junior mining sectors.

The venue was a new one, the very splendid Pewterers' Hall, located in the heart of the Foinancial District of the City of London, at St. Paul's.

We all know the junior mining sector has plummeted over the last couple of years. What this conference did was focus on the current undervaluations, and speculate on the opportunities that will be there when market sentiment returns.

Chris Berlet presented Canuc

Resources and Stakeholder Gold

The opening keynote speaker was Angelos Damaskos, founder and CEO of Sector Investment Managers, who spoke the economic outlook and equity market conditions.

The first company presentation was for a private company, but one with a lot of media attention, Cornish Lithium, presented by founder and CEO Jeremy Wrathall.

This project promises to supply lithium to future UK based giga factories, who require local supplies.

The next presenter was Chris Berlet, who made three very interesting short presentations during the course of the conference. Chris presented Canuc Resources, an exploration company based in Mexico with some Texan gas production which funds the company M and A expenses, minimising dilution.

Shaun Bunn, MD of Empire Metals closed the first session with a presentation about exploring for critical minerals in Australia.

The networking break was very busy, in the downstairs spacious hall.

Chris Berlet, President and CEO of Stakeholder Gold opened the second session, with another interesting god exploration story, this time in the Yukon. Once again there is a twist in that stakeholder generates cash flow with the sale of exotic blue quartzite from its wholly owned Brazilian subsidiary, Victoria Mining.

Again this minimises diution of the main project, a nice twist on the usual exploration story, of raise after raise.

Alan Carter, CEO, presented Cabral Gold, a mature gold exploration story in the prolific Tapajos region of Brazil. Alan is looking for early pilot production to fund further exploration, continuing on the theme set by Canuc and Stakeholder of generating early cashflow.

Claude Lemasson, CEO, presented Landore Resources, the final corporate presentation. Landore are developing the BAM gold project in a highly prospective area of Ontario, Canada.

The closing keynote presentation was made by Graham Dallas, Head of EMEA Business development for the TMX Group, owner of the Toronto Stock Exchange.

The conference closed with a lively networking buffet and refreshments.

Given the recent severe downturn in the value of many mining companies, especially the juniors, I was surprised at the excellent turnout the event attracted, and the vibrancy of the networking sessions.

The new venue is superb, and once again the Global Mining Finance Conference had a strong program of companies, and expert keynote speakers.

Cornish Lithium requires £10m Urgently

Cornish Lithium

A private lithium company in Cornwall, UK, has sent out an urgent plea in order to try and raise up to £10 million to continue their lithium exploration programme in Cornwall, in the West of England.

The company CEO blames a lack of government assistance.

Cornish Lithium in Urgent Plea for £10 million

It's very sad to see one of only two British Lithium projects is in financial trouble.

The two companies are Cornish Lithium, and British Lithium, and they are both based in Cornwall, in the west of England.

Cornish Lithium is the company desperately seeking funds, and blaming the government for lack of financial assistance, as they would be providing lithium produced in Britain, which the country so desperately needs for the EV revolution.

The full story can be read here

Ironically, just as Cornish Lithium were announcing their appeal for help, British Lithium signed a deal with French company Inverys, who will take an 80% stake in their lithium project, also located in Cornwall.

It's so sad to see the French taking such a large percentage of a British mining project, you have to question why time and time again we British give away ownership of national assets? Thames Water is a timely example!
