Colonial Coal Highlighted by Simply Wall St.

Colonial Coal (TSX.V: CAD) Simply Wall Street research has highlighted Colonial Coal as "one of three stocks to consider" in a recent research report.

CAD's price has fallen back recently as the price of coking coal has weakened, but has started to climb again in the last few weeks, as a result of incressing Chinese industrial activity, highlighting an undervaluation opportunity.

There has been speculation that Colonial is the target of M and A activity as the metallurgical coal sector is going through a lot of corporate activity.

A run in the coking coal price might just be the catalyst to attract that initial bid.

Colonial Coal – New Research Report Publihed by Hallgarten & Co.

A new research note written by New York and London based Hallgarten Investment Research is positive for Colonial Coal.

What is amusing is the price target given when the report was written a week ago has already been surpassed! A 50% increase in share price in a week means the report may need to be updated!

A week can be a long time in the markets, and so it has come to pass as a research note written a week ago with what looked like an achievable price target in the medium term, has already been surpassed.

It does seem as though the market is at last realising the undervaluation of CAD versus it's assets in the ground. Even after such a rise, the share price still looks underalued in my opinion.

One concern may be that of the price continues to rise we may be priced out, but of course the opposite is also true, where the rising price brings bidders to the table quicker as they seek to secure supply at an affordable price.

Colonial Coal Price Soaring – New Research Report

Colonial Coal (TSX.V: CAD)

The share price of Colonial Coal is soaring on the sky high price of steelmaking (coking) coal, and speculation the company may receive M & A activity in the near future.

Every $1 rise per tonne in the price of coking coal just makes the undervaluation of Colonial Coal at the resource level look ever more ridiculous.

Colonial Coal – New Research Report Published as The Share Price Soars

The share price of Colonial Coal is soaring on the sky high price of steelmaking (coking) coal, and speculation the company may receive M & A activity in the near future.

Every $1 rise per tonne in the price of coking coal just makes the undervaluation of Colonial Coal at the resource level look ever more ridiculous.

The company has proved up a substantial resource, and there is no point in them spending more money to add more tonnes when what they have is very attractive to a potential bidder.

It is well know that the highly experienced management team at Colonial Coal thrive on discovering new deposits, and vending them on at opportune moments, with Western Canadian Coal and NEMI being two prime examples.

Davis Austin and the team have been very open about the fact they are prepared to enter into a deal for one or both of their rich hard coking coal deposits in the prolific Peace River Basin region of British Columbia, and with the coking coal price at record highs, now would appear to be the moment that people are focusing on those rich assets.

A new research report has just been published by Bridgeport Capital of Vancouver, which is very bullish on CAD!

I recommend you read it, they cut to the chase, no flannel or waffle.
